

HOPE Newsletter - Issue 30 SocialShield's List of Words Every Parent Should Know

SocialShield's list sheds light on the latest lingo kids are using to hold illicit, risky or secretive conversations. The list includes several 'codes' kids use that their parents likely don't know - and should.

The list was compiled through an analysis of commonly "flagged" terms pegged by SocialShield's cloud-based monitoring engines which pick out terms that might be risky, illicit or dangerous.

SocialShield has categorized social media terms in six different categories which are: cyberbullying, warning of parents in the room, conversations sexual in nature, cries for help, drugs and drinking, and requests to meet in person.
